

sam auinger    santa cruz de la palma site studies 220405 - 2204015

Sound always has something musical and emotional as well as informative.

In Santa Cruz and its immediate surroundings, the clash of plantar and cosmic forces on our economic and cultural structures is highly palpable. A series of field recordings document this.

Plant Song

video

a one-string harp played by a plant in the light wind

Birds, Insects and a Quad

soundfile

A vibrant nature environment with lots of birds and insects is used as a playground for some individual fun.

Harbor Sing Sang

soundfile

The harbor in Santa Cruz de La Palma performs a kind of Sing Sang. A mix created by the wind, the waves pushing into the sheltered harbor basin, the pontoons that are always slightly in motion, and the running engines of the just loading large ferries.

Cooling Units Drone

soundfile

All the perishable products waiting at the Port of Santa Cruz in truck trailers with refrigeration units turned on produce an all-masking drone.

Semana Santa Beat

soundfile

Semana Santa procession. An exceptional rhythm that focuses on slow progress is implemented magnificently. This specific beat helps carry out all duties like carrying heavy statues and big crosses.